quite bring them in. The other one that is...perhaps bears a little bit of explanation is the language concerning inspecting, licensing, regulating, or auditing any person. In that context, the word person not only refers to flesh and blood individuals, in case you're wondering how you might be audited as an individual except for your income tax returns, that applies to entities that are also audited for various reasons. And then any similar action. And you can see that we would bring in by rule and regulation a wide variety of individuals; and in fact, as we discovered as we were exploring and educating ourselves about this issue, we found that the Athletic Director for the University of Nebraska is already covered by the section that Senator Chambers was suggesting that that individual be covered by, that that individual was covered through rules and regulations promulgated by the Accountability and Disclosure Commission. So Senator Chambers very kindly has asked you to amend his amendment and to remove that individual from the list that he is proposing that you begin to make of specific individuals or persons who hold specific occupations at the University of Nebraska to be included within the disclosure requirements. I am happy, of course, to support a shortening of the list; but I'm sure that we'll get more opportunities to talk about the list and what the list might mean as we take up Senator Chambers' amendment in the main. Thank you.

SENATOR CUDABACK: Thank you, Senator Wickersham. Senator Schimek, you're recognized.

SENATOR SCHIMEK: Yes, thank you, Mr. President, members. I was going to waive my time on this, but decided that perhaps for a variety of reasons we needed to spend a little time on this. I am, of course, supporting the Chambers amendment because, as has been stated already, the Athletic Director is already included in the rules and regs of the political Accountability and Disclosure Commission. I thought it might be interesting for you to find out what I found out in looking into this issue. And there's a whole laundry list of people who are already covered by the Accountability and Disclosure Commission's rules and regs. At the University of Nebraska we have, of course, a Board of Regents; the president; the executive vice president and provost; the vice president and general counsel; the vice
